THE PARSON'S DAUGHTER.

There was a great commotion in Foxville when old parson Fox died. It was because Foxville curiosity was on the qui vive about Joanna, his grandchild, the sole remaining blossom on the gnarled old family tree, who was left quite unprovided for.

'I declare to goodness,' said Mrs. Emmons. 'I don't know what is to become of that girl!' 'She hasn't no faculty,' said Sabina Sexton, the village dressmaker; 'and never had.'

'Books possessed no charm for her!' signed Miss Dodge, who taught the Foxville district school. 'She always cried over parsing, and I never could make her understand cube root.'

'There's no denyin' that the old minister was as near a saint as we often see in this world,' said Mrs. Luke Lockedge piously. 'But he hadn't ought to let Joanna run loose in the woods and fields the way he did. Why, I don't suppose she ever made a shirt or fried a batch of fritters in all her life.'

'It is true,' said Miss Dodge, peering inquisitively up under her spectacle-glasses, 'that she is engaged to your Simon, Mrs. Lockedge?' Mrs. Lockedge closed her mouth, shook her head and knitted away until her needles shone like forked lightning.

'Simon's like all other young men, Miss Dodge,' said she, 'took by a pretty face and a pair o' dark eyes. And they sat on the same bench at school. And as long as we s'posed Parson Fox had left property, why, there wasn't no objection. But there wasn't nothing—not even a life insurance. So I've talked to Simon, and made him hear reason. There can't nobody live on air.'

'But that's rather hard on Joanna ain't it?' said Mrs. Emmons, with a little sympathetic wheeze. 'Reason is reason?' Mrs. Lockedge answered. 'My Simon will have property, and the girl he marries must have somethin' to match it.'

So that Joanna Fox, sitting listlessly in her black dress by the window, where the scent of honeysuckles floated sweetly in, and trying to realize that she was alone in the world, had divers and sundry visitors that day. The first was Simon Lockedge, looking as if his errand were somehow connected with grand larceny. Joanna started up, her face brightened. She was only sixteen—a brown-haired brown eyed girl with a lumpy, red mouth and a round, white throat, banded with black velvet.

must be done, and she rules the roost in our house.' Next came Mrs. Emmons. 'Joanna,' said she, 'I'm deeply grieved at this ere affliction that's befallen you.'

'Thank you Mrs. Emmons,' said the girl, mechanically. 'I've come to ask you about your plans,' added the plump widow, 'because if you have no other intentions, I'll be glad to have you help me a little with the housework. I'm goin' to have a house full o' summer boarders, and there'll be a deal more work than me and Elviry can manage. Of course you won't expect no pay, but a good home is what you need most, and—'

'Stop a minute,' said Joanno. 'Am I to understand that you expect me to assume the position and duties of a servant, without a servant's wages, Mrs. Emmons?' 'You'll be a member of the family,' said Mrs. Emmons. 'You'll sit at the same table with me and Elviry and—'

'I am much obliged to you,' said Joanna, 'but I must decline your kind offer.' And Mrs. Emmons departed in righteous wrath, audibly declaring her conviction that pride was certain, sooner or later, to have a fall. 'I have plenty of friends,' said Joanna courageously, 'or rather dear grandpapa had. I am sure to be provided for.'

But Squire Barton looked harder than any fiend when the orphan came to him. 'Something to do, Miss Fox?' said he. 'Well, that's the very problem of the age—woman's work, you know, and I ain't smart enough to solve it. Copying? No, our firm don't need that sort of work. Do I know of any one that does? N-no, I can't say I do. But if I should hear of any opening I'll be sure to let you know. I am a little busy this morning, Miss Fox. Sorry I can't devote more time to you. John, the door. Good morning, my dear Miss Fox. I assure you have mine and Mrs. Barton's prayers in this sad visitation of an inscrutable providence.'

Old Miss Gringe, who had twenty-five thousand dollars at interest, and who had always declared that she loved dear Joanna Fox like a daughter, sent down word that she wasn't very well, and couldn't see company. Dr. Wentworth, in visiting whose invalid daughter poor old parson Fox had contracted the illness which carried him to his grave, was brusque and short. He was sorry for Miss Joanna, of course, but he didn't know of any way in which he could be useful. He understood there was a kind of glove factory to be opened on Walling river soon. 'No doubt Miss Miss Fox could get a place there. Or there would be no objection to her going out to domestic service. There was a great deal of false sentiment on this subject, and he thought—'

But Joanna, without waiting for the result of his cogitation, excused herself. She would detain him no longer, she said. And she went away with flaming cheeks and resolutely repressed tears. When she arrived home she found one of the church awaiting her. He didn't wish to hurry her, he said, but the new clergyman didn't want to live in such a ruinous old place. It was their calculation, as the parsonage was mortgaged much beyond its real value, to sell it out, and buy a new house, with all the modern conveniences for the use of the Rev. Silas Speaking.

'Am I to be turned out of my home?' said Joanna, indignantly. Deacon Blydenburg hemmed and hawed. He didn't want to hurt anyone's feelings, but as to her home, it was well known that to all intents and purposes the old place had long ago passed out of Parson Fox's ownership. They were willing to accord her any reasonable length of time to pack up and take leave of her friends—say a week. So Joanna, who could think of no remaining friend but her old governess, who had long ago gone to New York to fight the great world for herself, went down to the city, and appealed to Miss Woodin in her extremity. Miss Woodin cried over her, and kissed her, and carressed her like an old maiden aunt.

'What am I to do?' said poor, pale Joanna. 'I can't starve.' 'There's no necessity for any one starving in this great busy world,' said Miss Woodin, cheerfully. 'All one wants is faculty.' Joanna shrank a little from the hard word, which she had so often heard from the lips of Mrs. Emmons, Miss Sabina Sexton and that sisterhood. 'But how do you live?' said she. 'Do you see that thing there in the corner?' said Miss Woodin. 'Yes,' answered Joanna. 'Is it a sewing-machine?' 'Anything I can get,' answered Miss Woodin. And thus in the heart of the great wilderness of New York Joanna commenced her pilgrimage of toil. First on the type-writer, then promoted to a compiler's desk in the 'Fashion Department' of a prominent weekly journal. Then, by means of a striking, original sketch, slipped into the letterbox of the 'Ladies' Weekly' with fear and trembling, to a place on the contributor's list. Then gradually rising to the rank of a spirited young novelist, until our village damsel had her pretty rooms furnished like a miniature palace, with Miss Woodin and her type-writer snugly installed in one corner. 'Because I owe everything to her,' said the young authoress, gratefully. And one day, glancing over the exchanges in the sanctum of the 'Ladies' Weekly', to whose columns she still contributed, she came across a copy of the 'Foxville Gazette'. 'Hester,' she said, hurrying home to Miss Woodin, 'the old parsonage is to be sold at auction to-morrow, and I mean to go up and buy it. For I am quite—quite sure that I could write there better than anywhere else in the world.'

Miss Woodin agreed with Joanna. In her eyes, the successful young writer was always right. So Joanna and Miss Woodin, dressed in black and closely veiled, went up to Foxville to attend the sale. Everybody was there, with a vague idea of purchasing the old place for a public garden. 'It would be attractive,' said Squire Barton. 'These open-air concert-gardens are making no end of money in the cities. I don't see why the Germans need pocket all the money that there is going.'

Miss Dodge, who had saved a little money, thought that if the place went cheap she would pay down a part, and give a mortgage for the remainder. 'And my sister could keep boarders,' she considered, 'and I could always have a home there.'

But Simon Lockedge was most determined of all to have the old parsonage for his own. 'I could fix it up,' said he to himself, and live there real comfortable. It's a dreadful pretty location, and I'm bound to have it—especially since mother's investments have turned out bad, and we've got to sell the old farm. Nothing hasn't gone right with me since I broke off with the old parson's granddaughter. It wasn't quite the square thing to do, but there seemed no other way. But, let mother say what she will, it brought bad luck to us.'

And the rustic crowd surged in and out, and the auctioneer mounted to his platform, and the bidding began at two thousand five hundred dollars, and 'hung fire' for some time. 'Three thousand!' said cautious Simon at last. 'Four thousand!' peeped Miss Dodge faintly. 'Five thousand!' said Simon, resolutely. 'Seven thousand!' uttered the voice of a veiled lady in the corner. Every one started in that direction. 'Tain't worth that,' said Squire Barton. 'All run down—fences gone to nothing.'

But Simon Lockedge wanted it very much. 'Nine thousand!' said he, slowly and unwillingly. 'Twelve thousand!' spoke the soft voice decidedly. 'Twelve thousand dollars!' bawled the auctioneer. 'I'm offered twelve thousand dollars for this property.' 'Twelve thousand—twelve—twelve—twelve! Twelve thousand, once—twelve thousand twice—twelve thousand three times, and gone! What name, ma'am, if you please?' he asked.

And the lady, throwing aside her veil, answered— 'Joanna Fox.' The old parsonage was rebuilt, and studded with little bay-windows and mediæval porches. Laurels and rhododendrons were set out in the grounds; and Joanna Fox and Miss Woodin came there to live in modest comfort. But Mrs. Lockedge and her son Simon moved out of Foxville when the mortgage on the 'old place' was foreclosed, and the places that known them once knew them no more. 'And Mrs. Emmons said—' 'She's done real well, Joanna has. I always knew there was something in her!'

And Mrs. Wentworth, and the Messes Barton tried desperately to become intimate with the young authoress, but without avail. Outward bound—books. A Venetian blind—Othello. It bears the palm—The hand. The border State—Tired of hash. Fruitful of trouble—Green apples. Often called to mind—The nursery maid. A rich man, like velvet, is valued by his pile. House sharps are now all building flats. How to hunt and fight the tiger—with the pack. Every man is religiously inclined when on his knees. Light-fingered people are generally taper fingered. It is the cooper who has the staving time—he is always hooping it up. When the ship's bulwarks are like a gambler—when they ring in a cold deck.

THE DISPATCH ON NEGRO TRUSTEES.

Last week we said: "The Richmond Dispatch is strangely silent on the subject of 'negro trustees.' Have the bosses told it to 'shut up'?" This little question of ours has called forth from the Dispatch an article of half a column in which it asserts that the Lynchburg convention is the only "boss" the Virginia Democrats (Funders) obey. The convention made DARBO its "boss"; consequently he is the "boss" of the so-called Democrats, and consequently "boss" of the Dispatch. But the Dispatch intimates that the Funder convention drew the "color line" very distinctly by its resolution on colored trustees and schools. We would remind it that all other Funder papers are now very diligently engaged trying to show that it was not the intention of the convention to draw the "color line." And it is well known that DEZENOFF, WOLTZ and other straight-outs exercised more influence upon the Bourbon convention than did KELLY, FULKERSON and others who were in favor of drawing the "color line." The Dispatch, speaking of the PATRIOT-HERALD, says: "Is that paper in favor of the appointment of negro trustees for white schools? 'Speak out.'"

The Dispatch knows our position and only seeks to dodge, and by sharp practice evade the question we propounded. It knows we endorse the Cameron Board in its appointment of negro trustees. It knows that Board did not appoint colored trustees for white schools; but only followed a precedent set by the Walker, the Kemper, and the Holiday Boards of Education, all Funder, in the appointment of colored trustees on School Boards where there were large numbers of colored schools and pupils. Our cotemporary knows very well that for ten years it, and all the Funder party acquiesced in the appointment of colored trustees, continuously, in Petersburg and elsewhere in the State, which colored trustees, appointed by Funder Boards exercised precisely the same functions, being invested with the same authority, that the colored trustees appointed by the Cameron Board exercise. Negro trustees on school boards did not become "negro trustees for white schools" until they were appointed by Readjusters—they were only "colored trustees on school boards" when appointed by Funders. Why the Dispatch and other Funders did not even raise their cry against the appointment of colored trustees as an "outrage" when this same Readjuster Board last year appointed three colored trustees on the School Board of Petersburg. The only howl that was then made was against turning white teachers out of the colored schools. The Dispatch admits that the PATRIOT-HERALD is opposed to mixed schools. We are astonished that it should admit the truth in that particular when it deliberately seeks to mislead the people by asserting that the Readjuster Board of Education has appointed special negro trustees for white schools, instead of telling the people the truth—that the Readjuster Board had done precisely the same thing that the Funder Boards had done, and that the Dispatch had endorsed it by ten years of acquiescence.

Yes, we are opposed to mixed schools, and so is the entire Readjuster party, the white Readjusters and the colored Readjusters. We have been for unmixing the schools that Funders so long kept mixed. We have been for taking white teachers from the colored schools. The Funders were not for this, but set up a terrible howl last year when the Readjusters began to take white teachers from the colored schools, denouncing it as one of the cruel outrages of "Mahoneism." They have put a demagogic plank in their platform, expressing a willingness to take white teachers from the colored schools—endorsing what Readjustment has done, and what Funderism wholly refused to do when it had the power. The Dispatch threatens that "the negroes will have to accept the proposition of the Lynchburg Convention or do worse for themselves." This threat is really amusing, coming from the organ of a party that is defeated and despised by the people. It is hardly probable that the sensible people of the State will be deceived by the false cries of Bourbonism, when it denounces as an outrage in Readjustment what was a virtue when performed by Funderism.

No, we are not afraid to discuss this negro trustee question. You may try to discuss it from a false stand-point; but we can and will bring you down to the real question, that is, "the appointment of colored school trustees" by the Cameron Board of Education, who are invested with precisely the same power and authority as the colored trustees who were appointed by Funder Boards during the ten years Funders were in authority—which appointments were ratified and endorsed by all the Funders, the Dispatch included. We will hold you there. Keep up the fight. We dare you!

We wonder if the simple minded Funder scribblers who write in such glowing terms of JOHN S. BARBOUR as a successful railroad manager have ever heard of how Mr. BARBOUR made the Orange & Alexandria railroad bankrupt, lost for the State over three millions of dollars of stock she had in the road, sunk every dollar the individual shareholders in Virginia held in the road; and failed to pay the labor and supply claims of his road, except after protracted litigation, and then by a shaving process at a Brokers shop in Alexandria. JNO. S. BARBOUR has been a most pronounced failure as a railroad man, and will prove himself a worse failure as a political manager.

The Funder members of the Legislature of 1881-82 voted solidly against the bill which gave four hundred thousand dollars to the schools of the money received for the State's interest in the A. M. & O. railroad. They wanted the bondholders to get the money, although one million and a half of the school fund had been stolen and given to the bondholders.

Now don't the Funders by their votes and acts prove themselves friends of the Schools.

Will the people run the risk of having another fraudulent funding bill, recognizing thirteen millions of unjust debt and holding to the tax-receivable coupon, passed and fastened upon them, by placing in power the Funder Railroad Ring faction, now headed by JNO. S. BARBOUR? We have too much confidence in the people to think so.

The Readjusters of the Senatorial district composed of Grayson, Floyd and Carroll have nominated Hon. AMOS DICKINSON, of Floyd, as their candidate for the Senate. Big 4 Hale might as well go to the rear, for uncle AMOS is sure to represent the people of that district in the next Senate.

Heretofore the battles have been fought by the people against bondholders and foreign syndicates. This time the battle is between the railroads and bondholders on the one side and the people on the other. The people will again win.

Remember Readjusters their will be a rally of your party next Monday to make your organization in Smyth more complete, and to select delegates to a Convention to nominate a candidate for the House of Delegates.

The young man who criticizes persons for calling the platform of the Funder party a vile piece of hypocrisy ought to learn how spell the word hypocrisy before he undertakes to define its meaning.

The Bourbons have shown their devotion to Democracy by nominating Gen. W. C. WICKHAM, the bitter-radical republican in the State, as their candidate for Senate in the Hanover district.

ABE FULKERSON and DAN TRIGG will be a nice team for the Funders of Washington county to run for the Legislature; and they will be nicely beaten by the Readjusters of that county.

HON. F. S. BLAIR will be here next Monday, certain. Let there be a large gathering of the people to hear this devoted and able champion of Readjustment.

NEWBERRY'S cry of "this way freemen" was only responded to by MASSEY'S slaves, and is a appropriate battle cry for railroad Hessians.

The Funders are bound to lose in this campaign. JOHN DANIEL wrote their platform. He is a political failure.

The railroads fear a Readjuster Legislature, and hence they combine with the bondholders to restore Funderism to power.

Will the people jeopardize FREE SUFFRAGE by placing the Railroad Ringsters in control of our State? Never!

REMEMBER that BLAIR will speak to the people of Smyth next Monday, the 20th.

Will the people place the schools at the mercy of JNO. S. BARBOUR's railroad party or faction? Surely not.

Demo-Wickham-Crats.

Let not the Bourbons of Hanover and Caroline hereafter claim the name of Democrat as they expect to be respected, or respect the ordinary intelligence of their fellow-citizens.

The action of the Bourbon Convention at Bowling Green in calling upon Gen. Wickham falsifies every pretence they make either to Democracy or against the Coalition party. Let us look now, not passionately, but candidly, at the exhibition they have made of themselves.

These Bourbons cry out against the Coalitionists that they are false to the memory of their Confederate comrades.

Yet they themselves have sought the leadership of Gen. Wickham, who, as early as April 23rd 1865, in his famous letter to Mr. Stearns, after having been a Confederate Brigadier General, denounced the folly of the war and its leaders and shortly thereafter proclaimed that he "never saw the old flag, even in the battle front, without tears in his eyes." If we do the General injustice in this quotation, we will gladly correct it.

The Bourbons have been whining that they fear, under Coalition rule, a return to the condition of affairs threatened in 1869.

Yet they have voluntarily sought to be led and are cheerfully following General Wickham, who voted for Wells and for retaining the obnoxious clauses in the Constitution. If we do the General injustice in this we will gladly correct it.

These Bourbons forever chant denunciation of the so-called corrupt administration of the Republican party under Grant.

Yet they knowingly seek out Gen. Wickham, who twice voted for Mr. Grant, and a third time went to Chicago and voted with Grant's 306 followers to elect Grant to a third term until Grant was dropped.

These Bourbons have just returned from Lynchburg, where they arraigned the Republican party for every high crime and misdemeanor.

Yet they abjectly beg Gen. Wickham, a Republican for eighteen years a third term, and the first names elector for Garfield and Arthur, to grant them the privilege of voting for him.

These Bourbons have not yet brushed the dust of travel from their trip to Lynchburg where they declared for a revenue tariff.

And yet they seek the poor boon of voting for Gen. Wickham, high tariff protectionist of the most ultra type.

In the name of all that is sensible, what does Gen. Wickham represent that is in their platform? What does their platform represent that is in Gen. Wickham?

They have but one sentiment on earth in common, and that is—"Anything to beat Mahone."

The Bourbons have not sense enough to know the folly of that cry, but Gen. Wickham was once the beneficiary of a cry as senseless. He ought to remember that when he was espousing Grant the Bourbons took up a disaffected Republican named Greeley, and cried "Anything to beat Grant!" "Yet, although the Bourbons had a majority of 30,000 voters in Virginia, Grant and Wickham beat them and their foolish. "Anything to beat Grant" by 5,000 majority.

General Wickham is now, unfortunately for him, playing the part of a little Greeley, and Greeley's fate awaits him.

Poor old Horace had at least a claim on the old Confederate soldiers for having bailed Jeff. Davis about the time that his old comrade (Wickham) was denouncing him, and old Horace was not suspected of an over-weakness for Richmond monopolies at a time when the people were in arms against them. Yet Horace Greeley failed, and Wickham helped to kill him, and forgetting his fate, courts a similar destruction.

We write in no spirit of dislike to General Wickham, for our feeling is quite friendly towards him; but, in Heaven's name, how can a man who supports General Wickham call himself a Democrat or complain that any one else is not a Democrat?

When the General comes to seek Republican votes he will no doubt find himself somewhat perplexed to explain how so ardent a Republican as himself has been supporting such enthusiastic Democrats as Daniel and George D. Wise, and is now "in full accord with the Democratic party of this State," and practically their nominee for the Virginia Senate.

We have occasionally been asked: How are you going to vote in 1884? May we be pardoned for asking Gen. Wickham this question.—Richmond Whig.

NOAH'S ARK DISCOVERED.

NOAH'S ARK DISCOVERED. Finding of the Ancient Vessel in a Glacier on Mount Ararat.

A Constantinople contemporary announces the discovery of Noah's Ark. It appears that some Turkish Commissioners appointed to investigate the question of avalanches on Mount Ararat suddenly came upon a gigantic structure of very dark wood protruding from a glacier. They made inquiries of the inhabitants (Q. 1,725 in their report.) These had seen it for six years, but had been afraid to approach it because a spirit of fierce aspect had been seen looking out of the upper window. Turkish Commissioners, however, are bold men, not deterred by such trifles, and they determined to reach it. Situated as it was among the fastnesses of one of the glens of Mount Ararat, it was a work of enormous difficulty, and it was only after many hardships they succeeded. The ark, one will be glad to hear, was in a good state of preservation, although the angles—observe, not the bow or stern—had been a good deal broken in its descent. They recognized it at once. There was an Englishman among them who had presumably read his Bible, and he saw it was made of the ancient gopher wood of Scripture which as every one knows, only grows on the plains of the Euphrates. Effecting an entrance into the structure, which was painted brown, they found that the Admiralty requirements for the conveyance of horses had been carried out, and the interior was divided into partitions fifteen feet high. In three of these only could they get, the others being full of ice, and how far the ark extended into the glacier they could not tell. It, however, on being uncovered it turns out to be 300 cubits long it will go hard with disbelievers in the book of Genesis. "Needless to say," says the Pall Mall Gazette, "an American was soon on the spot, and negotiations have been entered into with the local Pacha for its speedy transfer to the United States."—New York Herald.

Upward and Upward.

The reins are held loosely in the hands of the driver, and the horses do their work with scarcely anything of direction. How carefully they seek a foothold, planting their hoofs firmly and applying their tremendous leverage with the utmost nicety and very like human skill. There is no jerking or writhing or twisting in the harness, no desperate plunges or impulsive efforts to gain a point or pass an obstacle. Pulling together with unity of exertion surprising in brute beasts, they apply and expand their power with the steadiness and regularity exhibited in a complicated "fall" when vast weights are moving, the wheels of the wagon meanly often indicating little more of revolution than the sheaves in the block in the other case. A peculiar difficulty overcome, they take a few steps forward more briskly; in fact, every advantage presented is improved and the most made of every situation at the moment. But from the outset to the finish there is no absolute pause in the upward movement.

The forest trees grow down to the very edge of the road, and the foliage with which they are loaded rustles and whispers in the air around, making the whole scene animated. The broad moose-leaf and various mountain shrubs and plants display their characteristics on every hand. The mountain flowers, almost always diminutive in blossom and delicate both in shape and tinting, adorn and brighten the roadsides. The sunbeams fall scantly, and anything like rough breezes and screened by the leafy walls on either hand. Your mountain driver is never boisterous; he wastes no breath in yawning at his team or "gabbing" with his freight. His words are few and strictly confidential with his horses, consisting usually of a monosyllable or two, occasionally coupled with the name of some individual of his team. His eye is for his team, his hand for his reins, his foot for the brake, and his thought for his business, which is to give safe and pleasant transit; but, now and then, he may be astonished by an unexpected manifestation of sentiment in response to some chance question.—Correspondence Boston Herald.

Death of a Wealthy Colored Woman.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gloucester, widow of the Rev. J. N. Gloucester, and perhaps the wealthiest colored woman in the United States, died at her residence, the Rensselaer House, a first-class boardinghouse, of which she was proprietor, in Brooklyn, N. Y., Wednesday, aged 66 years. Her wealth is estimated at $500,000. She was born in slavery in Richmond, Va., but, with her parents, was set free when five years of age. She went into the service of a Quaker lady in Philadelphia when a child, where she learned those habits of economy to which she owed her wealth. When earning but ten shillings a week she put a portion of it in bank, and accumulated enough to purchase some unimproved property in New York about the time of her marriage. This property rapidly advanced in value, and her subsequent investments added rapidly to her fortune. While residing in New York, Mrs. Gloucester became acquainted with John Brown, who became a fast friend of hers. She several times supplied him with money, and he was always a welcome guest at her house.

Awful Scenes in Ischia.

The state of affairs at Ischia is worse now than ever. At first it was decided to cover the whole scene of the earthquake with chloride of lime to protect the living in their necessary work among the ruins, so great and deadly has become the stench arising from the bodies of the more than eight thousand human beings known to have perished. But when it was found that scores of living persons were entombed in the ruins, the plan of wholesale disinfection had to be abandoned. To day a man was rescued alive from the ruins. The effluvia that followed from the crevice which his person had acted upon as a tight-fitting cork overpowered, his rescuers, all of whom fainted. There can be no doubt that many persons still remained alive in the Ischia ruins. It is probable that all those remaining alive to-morrow will have to be abandoned to their fate, as every part of the scene has ceased to be endurable. Scarcely a rescuer is left able to resist the terrible vomitings compelled by the indescribable stenches now prevalent. The entire island has been almost constantly shaken by a series of intermittent shocks ever since the great disaster of last Sunday. Strange to say, the odors which now render further rescue impossible, and drive the forces of humanitarians from this once beautiful island, will probably let in the hordes of Italian brigands who now hover about in sufficient force to pass any probable guard, waiting their chances to rush on the scene for any plunder.—London Cor. Boston Globe.

The Striking Telegraphers.

NEW YORK, Aug 10.—It is stated of good authority this morning that the striking telegraphers last night practically decided to abandon the strike.

Superintendent Humstone, of the Western Union Telegraph Company said this morning that the wires had not been disturbed during the night, and were all working satisfactorily. Two operators returned to work this morning, and several applicants have been rejected. He also said that although it had been reported that the strikers had voted to go on with the fight at their meeting yesterday, he had been informed that the leaders had begun to lose courage, and had told the men to make what arrangements they could, as the jig was up. However, he could not vouch for the truth of the story.

At the headquarters of the strikers, a committee consisting of Messrs. O'Connor, Campbell and Orr, was in session all the morning. They had little to say in regard to the strike, but expressed themselves as well satisfied with the condition of affairs. They confidently believed in the ultimate success of the strike, and thought that the telegraph companies were resorting to every expedient to conceal their real condition.

It was rumored to-day that a committee of strikers had been appointed to confer with president Elchert of the Western Union to ascertain upon what terms the Company would receive them back in its employ. It was stated that this movement was to be independent of the Brotherhood. The story was emphatically denied by many of the strikers who say that they never had any greater confidence in their leaders and that there are no such indications of weakness, as rumor would imply.

A Curious Coincidence.

Bishop Coxie relates that on one occasion he was reading the services in a little church, with only a handful of worshippers present, he suddenly resolved to close the Psalter with the Gloria in Excelsis in the history of our country. She asked him whether he had been desired by any of her relations to gratify her by departing from custom. She had always made this day one of special private devotion, as it was the anniversary of her husband's death. She had made an effort to be at church that morning on this account. "What was my surprise," she said, "to hear you break off with the 'Gloria in Excelsis.' My husband, very reticent as to his religious emotions, lay dying. Suddenly he aroused himself, and to the amazement of all, recited the 'Gloria' entire. Reflecting on this as I went to the church on this anniversary, imagine my surprise when, for the only time in a long life, I found the 'Gloria' so used by the clergyman. I joined in it with feelings greatly excited, and came to thank you for so kindly considering me." Her husband was a stranger to the Bishop, who regards the whole incident as supernatural.—Hardford Courant.

The trial of Canon Bernard, on a charge of abstracting valuable paper and securities from the Episcopal palace at Toronto, was concluded yesterday morning. The Canon was found not guilty of the charge.

Dr. M. E. Daughtry, Franklin, Va., says: "I am highly pleased with the effects of Brown's Iron Bitters and believe it to be superior to all other iron preparations."

Webb's Neighbor in the Silent Grave.

In the grave next to that of Capt. Webb in Oakland cemetery lies the body of Francis Abbott, the Hermit of Niagara, for whom Hermit's Cascade is named. It is so called because Abbott used to bathe there. He was a young man, gentlemanly and accomplished, who for two years lived a solitary life at Niagara. He had a hut, the first on Sister Island and later on he built one in what is now Prospect Park. He had but little intercourse with any one, wrote a great deal, and always in Latin, but destroyed all manuscript as soon as written. On Goat Island, at hours when it was unfrequented, he delighted to roam heedless, if not oblivious, of danger. At that time a stick of timber eight inches square extended from Terrapin bridge eight feet beyond the precipice. On this stick he has been seen at all hours of the night pacing to and fro, without the slightest tremor of nerve or hesitation of step. Some times he was seen sitting carelessly on the extreme end of the timber—some times hanging from it by his hands and feet. He belonged to a respectable English family, and his reasons for leading this life were never known. He was drowned while bathing near the foot of the Park railway in 1831. Buffalo Express.

Minnesota's Dueling Ground.

There is a curious state of things existing in a certain portion of this State, which can be described as follows: At the session of the Legislature in 1878 the name of Pembina county was changed to Kittson county. In 1879 Kittson county was divided, and with Marshall county, formed of the south half. A special law was enacted by the last Legislature permitting the electors of Marshall to vote upon the question of attaching this strip of debatable land to that county, the vote to be taken at a special election to be held July 9, 1879. The election was held at the specified time, and the vote cast was 337 in favor to only one against the annexation. A few days ago the returns were forwarded to the Secretary of State, and the Governor was about to issue his proclamation announcing the result and declaring that the strip aforesaid was annexed to Marshall county, when it was discovered that all propositions to change the boundary lines of a county must be submitted to a vote of the people affected thereby at a general election. The act of last winter is therefore void, and the vote taken out on the 9th instant, at the special election, of no legal effect. This leaves that strip of territory, of one and a half by sixty-five miles, without any government. It is neutral ground, and there is no process in law by which a crime committed therein can be punished. It is an admirable locality in which to fight a duel, and will remain so for two years more at least, unless the Governor calls an extra session of the Legislature to cure the difficulty.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Peanut Flour.

No doubt, ere long, "peanut flour" will be an important product of the South. Virginia is set down this year for 2,100,000 bushels, Tennessee for 250,000 and North Carolina at 135,000 bushels, these being the chief States engaged in their cultivation and those in which it was first introduced from Africa. In Virginia they are called "peanuts," in North Carolina "ground peas," in Tennessee "goobers," and in Georgia Alabama and Mississippi, "pinders." Virginians are beginning to turn the peanut into flour, and say it makes a peculiarly palatable "bisuit."

In Georgia there is a custom, now growing old, of grinding or pounding the shelled peanuts and turning them into pastry, which has some resemblance, both in looks and taste to that made of cocoanut, but the peanut pastry is more oily and richer, and, we think, healthier and better every way. If, as some people believe, Africa sent a curse to America in slavery, she certainly conferred upon her a blessing in the universally popular peanut, which grows so well throughout the Southern regions that we shall soon be able to cut off the now large importation altogether.—Savannah Telegram.

Startling Discovery in Iron Making.

A very startling piece of information comes from the Rive-de-Grie (France). A block of ore, weighing some thirty-five pounds, was broken into small pieces and placed into a melting furnace. When the ore reached the red-hot temperature a reagent was added and the fusion of the ore was complete in three minutes. This fusion was iron, and the reagent cost only eighteen cents per ton of the metal obtained. A blast furnace would thus produce twenty-two tons of iron every fourteen minutes, instead of every twelve days. Besides this the furnace would clean itself at every operation. The experiments were made at the iron works of M. Brunon, and should these statements be proved, metallurgical interests would have to conform to another transformation not less important than that involved in the Bessemer steel process.—Engineering News.

Strength to vigorously push a business, strength to study for a profession, strength to regulate a household, strength to do a day's labor without physical pain. Do you desire strength? If you are broken down, have no energy, feel as if life was hardly worth living, you can be relieved and restored to robust health and strength by taking Brown's Iron Bitters, a sure and effective remedy for all the diseases arising from a weak and diseased system. It acts on the blood, and muscles and regulates every part of the system.

Discontented Hayti.

A Port-au-Prince letter to the Herald says: The revolutionary movement began on the 27th of March, last by General Bazelaiz and his followers in Miragoane has spread all over the southern part of Hayti. The north side of the island will respond to the movement as soon as needed. The well-meaning, better class of people all wish earnestly to see a prompt end put to the government of President Solomon. In four years he has increased the indebtedness of the country, he has withheld payments due the public, and has not spent a dollar on public works. He paid for a while the interest on the debt in France under the illusion that he might borrow more money there. He secured French capital to establish a national bank. After getting $900,000 out of the Frenchmen, on their refusal to go any further he at once went to work to ruin the bank and break the contract. Like most small tyrants, Solomon has overreached himself. Every intelligent man in the country has been made an enemy of in consequence of oppression and tremendous exactions. If any demur is made the prison is used as an argument. In fact, in a town of about thirty thousand inhabitants, like Port-au-Prince, more than twelve hundred persons of both sexes are now kept in jail for supposed objections to robbery, which Solomon terms "political offences."

It is high time that this barbarous African system were stopped. The Haytiens, so long cowed and demoralized, have doubtless decided, with a constitution based on that of the United States, a republic, all official decrees being headed with the words "Liberte Egalite." Hayti is, nevertheless, no better governed than any petty little African kingdom. The leader of the revolutionary movement, General Bazelaiz, is the grand son of General Boyer, who, under colonial system, became an officer in the French army, took the side of his country in the struggle for independence, and governed Hayti as president for twelve years with great tact, moderation and economy. He (Bazelaiz) is an educated colored man imbued with modern ideas of republicanism. Whenever his followers have been in the administration they have always shown intelligence and good judgment, with the rare quality here of being honest.—In his first attempt of 1879, he encountered great opposition, and will probably meet with some now among those interested in keeping the regime. His superiority is so uncontested, however, and he has shown so much firmness, bravery and moderation in holding out with so small a following for four months in the little town of Miragoane against the government force of 6,000 men, that the people see that he has all the requirements of a good leader, and will promptly rally to his side. The country has been brought down to the very verge of bankruptcy and starvation. Until Solomon is disposed of there can be no improvement. People have no confidence in him. He must go. After that there may be a return to business prosperity and confidence.

The President in a New Camp.

CAMP VEST, on Spring Creek, W. Va., via Fort Washakie, Aug. 10.—The day so far since leaving Camp Bollings, at Bull Lake Fork, this morning at 7 o'clock, has been very uneventful. The President and all the members of the party are in excellent health and spirits. The country traversed over to-day was mostly covered with sage bush, varied by alternate ascending and descending of steep hills covered with loose stones, which made precarious footing for the animals. But one cannot help wondering why so much material was wasted in the making of so many apparently useless ridges when there are plenty of gulches which could so well be filled. All along the route, however, the glorious Wind River and the Owl Creek mountains, with their snow-clad peaks, are in sight, and offer a restfulness to the eyes of the travellers who are pursuing their way across the dry and heated places below. The camp on Spring Creek, however, is a very delightful one, being situated on pleasant ground, with plenty of essential requirements of good camping places—good water and grass. To the eastward of Crow Heart Butte, is the noted landmark of the River Valley, of which the photographer has obtained several good pictures.

This dispatch has to leave by a courier at 3 o'clock in the afternoon so that no report can be made to-day of the results obtained by the fishermen. The camp is named Camp Vest, in honor of Senator G. G. Vest who is one of the most enthusiastic and successful anglers of the party. After forwarding the dispatch yesterday from Bull Lake Fork, both the President and Senator Vest brought into the camp several creels full of trout as the result of their afternoon sport. There are no special or professional correspondents with the party.

Farm Notes.

One-half of the corn requires to fatten hogs in the fall if fed to them during the summer will give a better result, and of course, greatly increase profit.

As a rule less attention is given to pigs than the stable, and swine which are kept constantly in confined quarters are much more liable to become diseased when neglected than any other live stock.

Sheep at this season are much troubled with the gad fly, which lays eggs in their nostrils, and these hatching out cause the grub on the head. Tarring the noses is a good preventive.

It will pay to sow a bushel of rye per acre in the corn field now, and have it ready to plough under when you take the corn off.

The depredations of insects on farmers crops are compelling farmers to learn a good deal of entomology. It is much less common than it was a few years ago to kill a worm or bug merely because it looked ugly.

Farmers who have kept strict account with their stock say that a pound of poultry can be made for less than a pound of pork, yet the laboring man who has to buy both feels that he cannot afford to buy poultry very often, as it costs more than other meats.

If one of the most valuable properties of plaster on land is to absorb and hold ammonia until it can be taken up by the plant, and if many plants have the power of absorbing ammonia from the atmosphere through their leaves, may it not be the most profitable way to use plaster to scatter it over the leaves of the plants while they are damp?

Breeders keeping thoroughbred stock should remember that such animals need a "thoroughbred" farmer to give them thorough care, or they need not expect such result from them as have been reported by others as being obtained by those who have assisted in developing their reputation.

It is very important that stubble land intended for seeding with wheat should be ploughed as early possible. Only thus can the soil be made compact enough to insure a good seed bed.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE. The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows: "I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting most especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night and during the day, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh, and a continual cough, my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured. I attribute my recovery to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good. Yours respectfully, Z. P. Wilds."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrophulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.
