

HEART DISEASE, like many other ailments when they have taken hold of the system, never gets better of its own accord, but constantly grows worse. There are thousands who know they have a defective heart, but will not admit the fact. They don't want their friends to worry, and Don't know what to take for it, as they have been told time and again that heart disease was incurable. Such was the case of Mr. Silas Farley of Dyessville, Ohio who writes June 19, 1894, as follows: "I had heart disease for 23 years, my heart hurting me almost constantly. The first five years I doctored all the time, trying several physicians and remedies, until my last doctor told me it was only a question of time as I could not be cured. I gradually grew worse, very weak, and completely discouraged, until I lived, propped half up in bed, because I couldn't lie down nor sit up. Thinking my time had come I told my family what I wanted done when I was gone. But on the first day of March on the recommendation of Mrs. Fannie Jones, of Anderson, Ind., I commenced taking Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart and wonderful to tell, in ten days I was working at light work and on March 15 commenced framing a barn, which is heavy work, and I haven't lost a day since. I am 56 years old, 5 ft. 4 1/2 inches and weigh 250 lbs. Y believe I am fully cured, and I am now only anxious that everyone shall know of your wonderful remedies."

An Easter Proposal.
My dearest Lily, may I hope that since the Easter morn has come around, You will accept these Easter lilies fair—
They are the choicest that I found.
I heard you say, you love the lily more
Than all the other flowers that bloom.
The same confession, I must likewise make,
And from your lips, await my doom.
The Lily that I prize, you must divine,
None other 'tis but you, my dear,
Will you not by my Easter Lily then,
The one I'll treasure all the year?

Thought She Was a Witch
A SUPERSTITIOUS HUSBAND BURNS HIS WIFE TO DEATH.

Waterford, Ireland, April 10—A most extraordinary case of murder, arising from superstition, was inquired into yesterday by the special court of Clonmel 25 miles from here. Ten persons were arraigned before the court, charged with murdering a woman named Cleary, because they supposed her to be a witch. The prisoner included the murdered woman's husband and father. The evidence shows that Mrs. Cleary was suffering from nervousness and bronchitis, and her husband, believing her to be bewitched, and in order to exorcise the evil spirit, obtained a concoction from a herbalist of the neighborhood.

Then, while the other prisoners held the unfortunate woman in bed, her husband forced the obnoxious concoction of herbs down her throat. After this, the suffering woman was held over a fire and dreadfully burned, until she declared in the name of God that she was not Cleary's wife. This torture was repeated on the following day, but the woman refused to conform to her husband's requests, whereupon he knocked her down, stripped off her clothing, poured paraffine over her body, then lighted it, and the woman burned to death in the presence of six male and two female relatives.

Cleary declared that he was burning his wife, but that he was burning a witch, and that she would disappear up the chimney.
When the woman was dead her husband collected her charred remains in a sheet and buried them in a dyke, beneath the moor, where they were found a week later. The prisoners, who were remanded, narrowly escaped lynching at the hands of an excited crowd in and about the court-room, and had to be removed to jail under the escort of a strong force of constabulary.

Rise in Meat.
New York, April 12.—Breadstreet's tomorrow, April 13th, will say:
The feature in trade circles is found in the prices movement, more particularly those for cattle, dressed beef, and petroleum. Drought, low prices, and hard times within two years have resulted in a short supply of cattle, prospectively 30 per cent. less than last year. Live cattle are $1.50 higher per hundred pounds than last year, and $1 higher than the lowest point this year. Dressed beef is 2 1/2 cents higher than the average last year, the highest since 1835. The comparative scarcity of high-grade cattle is emphasized by the fact that quotations when made in previous periods of scarcity, have never failed to bring a supply when one existed.

Girls Killed in Church.
ONE STRANGLED AND THE OTHER HACKED TO DEATH.

San Francisco, Cal., April 15.—The Emanuel Baptist church, at Bartlett street, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets in this city, has been the scene of two of the most atrocious murders ever committed in the State. Saturday the mutilated body of Minnie Williams was found in the library of the edifice. Yesterday the nude body of Miss Blanche Lamont was found in the tower of the same church. She had been strangled to death. The same night the authorities believe, slew two girls, and W. H. P. Durrant, the young man, suspected of both crimes, is now in custody.

Blanche Lamont and Minnie Williams were members of the Emanuel church, and members of the Sunday school class. The former was a student at the Normal School, on Powell street, in this city; the latter was a companion in a family in Alameda, across the bay from the city. They both were twenty one years old, being brunets and pretty and modest girls. Both had been the recipients of attention from a young medical student named W. H. P. Durrant, who is also the librarian of the church and the secretary of the Young People's Society of the church. Both girls had been assaulted.

Durrant is about twenty three years of age, and was born and raised in the neighborhood in which the murders occurred.

THE BROTHERS' FEUD.
Story of Two Men Who Quarreled Right Up to the Floor of Death.
"You will take the road to the right, over the hill, at 'Brothers' Feud,'" said the liveryman. "The bridge on the lower road was washed away in the storm."
"Brothers' Feud?" said I. "Where is that?"
"Aren't you acquainted in this country? No? Well, you can't be. Every one within a hundred miles knows about Brothers' Feud. The way of it was, when old man Elliott died he gave his farm undivided to his two sons. They had no other relatives living. But they couldn't get along together, and one of them brought suit for partition. The place is very hilly, and wasn't worth much in the first place. And the lawyer fees didn't make it a yore valuable. But they finally got the matter through court, and the survivor came out to survey the place. They asked him who was to pay him, and he said they would each pay half the expense of partition. They agreed, and he went ahead. One of them paid and the other didn't. That was noboddy's loss but the survivor's, but it made the paying brother so mad to think his brother had done less than himself that he took up the dividing line stakes and set them over two rods in his brother's land. That made his brother mad, and he took up the stakes and set them two rods beyond the line. So they began quarreling over that four rods of hill land that wasn't worth ten dollars an acre. But the timber was fine, and when the lawyers came along and offered twenty dollars a thousand for stave timber Jim and Joe began quarreling in earnest.

Each one hired a gang of choppers and the choppers took up the fight, for it did seem the likeliest timber grew in the disputed strip. Why, these choppers had regular battles there and the sheriff had to go out with a posse. Three men were killed—just chopped to death with axes. We have had more criminal cases from that four rods of sand and gravel than from all the rest of the county. We finally had to get out a company of militia, when the buyers run up the price to twenty-two dollars a thousand. It was worth something then. But each fellow spent all he made from his trees defending his suits, and when the timber was finally gone and the price fell there stood about the only good walnut in the county. That is worth a good deal of money now. All the rest of the walnut sold years ago and it was worth almost its weight in silver.

"Well, if you go by there to-day you will most likely see two gray-haired old men sitting on each side of the strip of timber, each one with a rifle beside him, and waiting to kill the other if he steps on the strip. They both swear they will stay right there till they die. I suppose they will, but if either of them gets reckless and ventures on the strip his brother will shoot him down."

"I found the 'Brothers Feud' without any trouble and looked with great interest for the two insane brothers. They had been so devoted to their guns that they had never married, and they lived all alone, each in a little cabin their father had given them. As I drove along I saw a group of neighbors about one of the houses. At the door of the other sat a trembling, palsied old man, with a rifle across his unsteady knees. I went up to the crowd and found that Jim was dead.

"Been dead two or three days when we found him," said the neighbor.
"What more does his brother want?" I asked. "He still seems to be on guard."
"Well, he is so deaf he can't hear when he holler over and tell him, and he is so blind he couldn't see when his brother fell down by the log here and died. Besides, he has lost his reason. He will never know that the brothers' feud is ended."—Chicago Herald.

HOW A JEW CAN FIND A JEW.
The Quaker Custom that Enables One to Locate the Home of Another.
A certain class of Jewish peddlers desire to deal only with people of their own race. They visit the houses of the poorer quarters of the city, where Jews live side by side with Germans, Swedes, Bohemians, Poles, Irish and others, yet they never knock at the door of a room where other than a Jew resides.

How do they do this? Their certainty is due to a simple cause—not known to the Gentile—which dates back to the times when history was young. The Jewish biblical story says that Moses instructed his followers to keep green the memory of their departure from Egypt by marking their houses so that they could be distinguished from those of the Gentiles. The last curse sent to first-borns The Jews marked their doors with lambs' blood, and the Destroying Angel passed by the doors so marked. This, and the biblical injunction, led to a custom among the orthodox Jews which is followed to this day. On the door-frame at the entrance to every Jewish house there is nailed a little tin box—generally three or four inches long and one-half or a whole inch wide. It is usually a piece of six or seven feet from the ground, and in it is rolled a piece of parchment containing the passage from the Bible referred to.

Not only is this placed at the entrance to the home, but the door-frame of every room is adorned with one of the sacred emblems. Extremely orthodox Jews touch the object and kiss their fingertips every time they pass beneath it. In portions of Europe, where the Jews are less modern than here, the little tin boxes are placed at the outer entrance of the houses, but here it is the custom to nail them on the inner portion of the door-frames.

And it is by looking behind the street door that the Jewish peddler can tell whether or not one of his co-religionists dwells within the house.—Chicago Tribune

ONE TYPE OF HUSBAND.
His is a Nature which Most Young Girls Would Avoid.

"Pity that woman."
"Pity her?"
"Yes, with all my heart; watch them."
She was a bud of a girl wife, and as she sat cozily ensconced in her light gray mat kimono, with its cap and big, though inoffensive, plaids—the picture of perfect loveliness intruded against the pleading darkness of the stormy night—one might well marvel at the one thought of pity. There was the unmistakable suggestion of an exquisitely rounded and graceful figure.

Her eyes were of a deep blue, shaded by dark brows and lashes, and the wavy strands of hair, a shade paler and more dull than golden, were parted about her forehead like ears of wheat, and when she smiled, as she held the pretty little bonnet firmly in place, her face was radiant, beautiful and marvellous in its intellectual in its outline; the complexion was fair but colorless—the irrefragable evidence of an habitual and harmlessly mild disposition.

She had been to the opera. He sat stiff and uncomfortable by her side. He was tall and dark and angular, and as he watched the two top-dressed men in a black overcoat there was shown the human form of the evening dress. His silk hat leaned, perhaps involuntarily, a little to one side, and his dark eyes increased the impression of a self-conscious uneasiness. A thin, dark beard, which evidently wasn't on speaking terms with the mouth, had also decided successfully any artistic intimacy with the barber's shears, and a little flush heightened the cheeks. He occupied only the forward part of his seat, while she curled back as far as possible and inclined slightly toward the vacant back of a chair. It is needless to add that they were going to their home in Brooklyn.

She evidently enjoyed the opera at least, and was anxious to dwell with him up in the boxes which pleased her most. Her mood also was a friendly, critical one. He seemed to have a chronic grade against himself and everybody else who presumed to interrupt his profound communion with his thoughts.

She sat a few moments in silence, then looked up into his face with childlike confidence and said something in a loud voice.
His features relaxed, the crease between his thin brows deepened and his face was put out and ireful as he threw his eyes toward her, more to let her understand he was about to address her than to look into hers.

"It likes to know what you know about it anyway."
She drew back a little in silence at his rough remark, but presently she forgave her chagrin and said something to him again.
"Well, you're a nice person to criticize anything like that, aren't you? Haven't you got any sense at all?"

dropped, the faint smile of interest faded from her face, and she sank back again to hide her embarrassment. But her, eventually, was one of those sunny, open temperaments which soon forget wrong, especially when perpetrated by a loved one, and it was not long before her countenance was again serenely tranquil and her happy eyes told of the pleasant thoughts which were fitting through her mind. Soon she looked up again and spoke to him.
"Yes, that's just about like you, the object least sensationally. Why don't you wait till you know something of what you are talking about before you begin to criticize? What do you suppose people go to hear it for, anyway? Do you think every one's a fool but you?"

And the man rattled on with his fierce repudiation, seeming to take a supreme delight in verbally chastising the sweet, shrinking little innocent at his side for presuming to exist or endeavoring to make the evening pleasant for him with her inoffensive prattle. As she shrank further and further back in her seat a paleness drove the blushes from her cheeks, and she had not recovered her courage to speak again when the train stopped at the City Hall station and they hurried across to the bridge cars.

He is the same probably in everything. His is a nature which does not change. They are married, and evidently have not been married more than a year or two.
How long will she endure it?
And at this crisis, which of the two dark cross-roads will she take?
"Yes, indeed; I pity that woman."—N. Y. Advertiser.

The bond is registered in the name of the commissioners of the sinking fund, and, of course, was of no use to the man who stole it.

Balls of different colors, about the size of a man's head, fell in the gardens on the house tops and in the trees, some of them bounding through the gardens and coming from the direction of the sun, and others falling straight to the ground they seemed to fall in clusters of about fifteen, some of them of brilliant hue, and others pale and black, and in a brief time would dissolve in smoke, while others sparkled and disappeared. The phenomenon continued about fifteen minutes.

Nerves Unstrung Weak, No Appetite—Hood's Sarsaparilla Restored Health. "Three years ago I had the grip, which settled in my head. It continued to grow worse and there was no rest for me. My limbs felt numb, my nerves seemed to be unstrung and I had no appetite. Doctor's treatment and other medicines failed to avail me relief. I obtained two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which restored me to myself. Last July I began to have bad symptoms, and I at once resorted to Hood's Sarsaparilla. I continued until I had taken three bottles, which not only restored my health but also cured my baby of a bunch and did him a great deal of good." Mrs. EMMA A. RAINEY, North Danville, Va. Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, carefully prepared from the best ingredients. 25c.

The New York Herald announced Friday morning a very important medical discovery by a talented young American doctor, of New York. It is nothing less than a cure for cancer by the administration of a drug which is described as the essential principle of jaborandi, the effect of which is to summon all the white corpuscles of the blood to the rescue of the diseased part, and its consequent restoration. This involves the cure of consumption, also, and the announcement is made upon the authority of the doctor, after consultation with responsible medical authorities in Europe, where he is studying.

Deafness Cannot be Cured by local application as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

Several of Marion's belles were disappointed on last Sunday by not being able to wear the beautiful Easter bonnet and dress. Instead of the bright sunshine on an Easter morn. the mountains as far as the eye could reach were covered with a mantle of snow.

A very pleasant entertainment was given by the Young Peoples society of the Presbyterian church on last Saturday night at the residence of Mrs. R. Lincoln. Quite a large company was present. Refreshments were served and elegant music furnished. The churches in Marion were all exquisitely decorated by the most beautiful flowers for Easter, displaying the fine taste on the part of the ladies of the different churches. One of the most beautiful of all the Easter services was the entertainment on Sunday afternoon, given by the Juvenile Missionary society of the Methodist church. The house was filled to its utmost capacity, and the little missionary workers were a source of delight to their friends. The exercises consisted of recitations by the children, and most excellent was rendered by the chorus choir, and the children under the skillful management of Mrs. Julia F. Pendleton.

Mr. R. L. Wilson, aged 83 years, who lived a mile north of town, was killed on last Friday by being struck by a log which had been cut on the hillside above where he was at work planting potatoes. He was warned by the man who was engaged cutting the logs to look out as the log was about to start and that it might roll over him. He followed back to let it come and he would get out of its way. The log was started, and on its way downward struck several stumps which changed its course so that Mr. Wilson did not know which way to get to be safe. A hen within several feet of the log struck a stump, leaped into the air and in coming down one end of the log struck him beside the head, knocking him about 15 feet. He was picked up and carried to his house where he died in three hours afterward. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn their loss.

SAYRE & SONS. The young ladies "Literary Club" was entertained on last Friday evening by Miss Louise Verable. They returned to the college Monday night.

The Benevolent Committee of the Methodist church gave a dinner on Monday in the Wilmore building. A most excellent dinner and supper were served by the ladies on the committee, and the net sum of $25 was raised for benevolent purposes. Many rise in the morning with a headache and no inclination for breakfast. This is due to torpidity of the liver and a deranged condition of the stomach. To restore healthy action to these organs, nothing is so efficacious as an occasional dose of Ayer's Pills. It seems that there is a great many people who do nothing at all, while others, in almost the same circum- stances, work continually; still these "sports," as they may be justly termed, have more of the luxuries of this life than those who work 10 hours per day. Truly it would appear that this is an unjust world.
